ABSTRACT

Ulik Eliska. DIFFICULTIES IN PRIMARY SCHOOL STUDENTS' BEGINNING READING: A CASE RESEARCH OF STUDENTS EXPERIENCED WITH SMARTPHONE ADDICTION AT MI GUPPI SENDANG. Thesis. Pacitan: STKIP PGRI Pacitan, 2024.

Reading difficulties are a common issue in elementary schools. This research aims to: 1) describe the forms of early reading difficulties; 2) describe the characteristics of smartphone addiction; and 3) examine the impact of smartphone addiction on students' reading difficulties at MI GUPPI Sendang.

This research employs a qualitative case research approach. The subjects include students with reading difficulties, their classroom teachers, and their parents. Data collection techniques involve observation, reading practice tests, interviews, and documentation. To ensure data validity, both technical and time triangulation were used. Data analysis was carried out through data reduction, data display, and conclusion drawing.

The findings reveal that: 1) students' reading difficulties include problems with reading consonant combinations, spelling diphthong vowel combinations, and distinguishing similar letters; 2) forms of smartphone addiction include difficulty concentrating while using a smartphone, trouble controlling the urge to use a smartphone, and using a smartphone for more than 3 hours a day; and 3) the effects of smartphone addiction on reading difficulties include decreased motivation to research, poor concentration during research, low reading interest, and excessive smartphone use beyond 3 hours a day.
